

Dream new Dreams

A dream it is one of many little movies playing in your head, it's a hope. We all dream dream for anything something we wish, for something we want to change, or simply a fairy tale we want to just play over and over in our heads. One day those dreams will come true and sometimes they won't but we half to keep on dreaming and keep on believing that one day it will all work out. He was fun, he was witty, but most important, he was caring. (page 6) That is all Jai dreamed of being with a man that would take care of her, and lover. She wanted someone who would be different someone down to earth. He was everything Jai wanted, but Jai knew something was going to happen and she had to be very strong, for him there friends and family, there kids, and most of all for herself.

Jai was smart she knew that even though it was going to be hard she was going to get through everything. It was like a Rorschach test, a fun game that elicited much conversation and laughter at the breakfast table(page 10). She used her knowledge to help her learn about what was going out in the world and with her problem in her life. Her husband was diagnosed with his cancer, and she knew nothing about it. So I didn't have a frame of reference to help guide me in this moment or down the road on our cancer odyssey(page #40). She went a researched about it, and learned what it was, and by the end she was almost a expert. She was smart with how she cared for her family and friends, she knew that this was a struggle but she made it work so she could care for and nurture her family.

It sickened me to even think about losing Chloe and I vehemently said no(page #36). Even if Jai didn't want to do something or felt strongly that something wasn't right she still tried to be kind. She was kind, she was asked to put Chloe up for adoptions, because they felt that they could not care for her but Jai said no trying to remain calm, and loving. Thought the whole cancer she was strong, even at times she wanted to rip someone's hair out. Jai learned that if she acted to quickly she could ruin something, so she kindly forgave those and helped others. Even at the hardest times she was kind to everyone.

To understand what someone is going through is to only go half way. You are understanding their decisions and why they do something. You are understanding what people are going through. Though I had great trepidation, I trusted Randy and our relationship, and I agreed to move to Pittsburgh(page #7). You can't just agree with someone you need to understand what they're going through and try to understand how hard it is for them. Jai didn't like the idea very much but she thought about it, and understood why Randy wanted to make this discussion. And then she agreed. She had a great understanding of why things happened, and was able to help other people understand.

We feel sometimes in the world like things are not worth it, but they are. They are when you open your eyes and see the beauty all around, you, you see why life is so precious. I understand all of Jai's choices in life, she was kind, smart, and understanding. And the choices she made were not only for her but she was trying to make it the best she could for everyone else. She new that life was going to be hard, and she tried to make it the best she could, and try to understand the reasons in life around her.